Donating
Residual Client Acccount Money

Donating any residual client account money to LionHeart is a legitimate and safe way to ensure you meet RICS regulations and at the same time support LionHeart's work. When you donate your surplus client account money to LionHeart we confirm that we can re-pay it to you should the need arise in the future.

Having residual client account money can be quite a burden for firms, but we know that you need to have complete confidence that we can refund the money if reclaimed. We have sufficient safeguards in place to guarantee that we will be able to reimburse you and offer an indemnity for all donations of this nature, irrespective of the amount.

How to donate Residual Client Account Money

Client account donations form an important part of our fundraising portfolio and many generous firms have chosen to donate to us in this way over the years.

If you would like to discuss donating client account money to us please email fundraising@lionheart.org.uk and someone will get back to you very soon.

For alternative methods, please see our website:
